CALADIUMS STRAP LEAF WHITE WONDER

Caladiums are indigenous to Brazil and neighboring areas of South and Central America where they grow in open areas of forests and along river banks. These tender bulbs, which are commercially cultivated in the sub tropics of Florida and Brazil, love and require warmth above anything else but are relatively maintenance free. They are known for their lush contrasting edges, veins and multi-colored tropical foliage even though they produce white flowers. They are best grown grouped in the garden. Growing caladiums from bulbs is easy and with proper care will last for years.

Great shade garden plant

Leaves more beautiful than flowers

*Plant them in the garden,
hanging baskets, pots,
barrels or tubs*

About This Variety: White Wonder is an elegant variety and very eye catching. Truly one of a kind!

Growing Instructions: Plant them rounded side with the 'eyes' up. Water well and frequently and do not let them dry out. In areas with lots of bright intense sunshine definitely plant them in full or partial shade or the leaves will burn and turn brown. They are heavy feeders and will benefit from fertilizing.

Care Tip: While temperatures are still cold outside, they can be started indoors in flats or pots filled with damp peat moss or vermiculite. Then transplant them into your garden once temperatures warm. Removing the main 'eye' (shoot) prior to planting will produce a more evenly rounded plant.

Exposure: Shade

Height: Grows 12-18" tall

Spacing: Plant- 6-8" apart, 1.5-2" deep

Hardy in: USDA zones 10-11

Guaranteed to grow 1 year from purchase if directions are followed. Any concerns related to quality and/or counts feel free to contact us.
