

Van Zyverden's LILAC PURPLE

The botanical name of the common Lilac is Syringavulgaris, but its common name does it little justice. It is an upright, multi-stemmed, deciduous shrub in the olive family that typical matures to 12-16 feet tall and 8-12 feet wide. It is a very reliable spring-flowering shrub for cold winter gardens. Excellent choice as a specimen/accent in small groups, shrub borders, hedges or screens. Great in cottage gardens or in the margins of woodland gardens. Who doesn't love plain, simple, perfect Lilacs?

Attracts hummingbirds and butterflies to the garden

Use as a hedge

Tolerant of deer and clay soils
