

Van Zyverden's
HOSTA WHITE FEATHER

Hostas are not grown for their flowers but for their foliage, which are prettier than the flowers. They come in a spectrum of blues, golds, greens, yellows and whites as well as variegated, some speckled and others striped. They thrive in the shade, even though they can withstand some sun, are long-lived and low-maintenance. Many Hosta varieties have seasonal color or can change color depending on growing conditions. While there are over 3,000 cultivars to choose from, we offer some of the more extra-ordinary each unique in color, texture and form.

About This Variety: Hosta White Feather is unique in that its white-cream leaves develop into green stripes as the plant grows throughout the season. A must have for collectors and Hosta lovers alike. Very unusual! This Hosta prefers the shade and does not like direct sunlight. Delivers major visual interest to the shade garden.

Growing Instructions: While drought tolerant, they do not like being kept dry for long, and prefer rich, well-drained soil with a consistent supply of moisture.

Care Tip: Virtually maintenance free, clip out dead flower stalks after flowering.
