BLEEDING HEARTS GOLD HEART

Lamprocapnos spectabilis Gold Heart is a golden leaved form of the common pink Bleeding Heart with which most gardeners are familiar. It is very similar in culture, characteristics and garden uses.

An excellent shade plant

Flowers late spring

Can be used as a cut flower

About This Variety: Good combination for hostas and ferns which begin to fill in as the Bleeding Heart begins to die back. This variety was formally known as dicentra spectabilis. Flowers are heart shaped hence its common name and appearance of a bleeding heart.

Growing Instructions: Performs best in average, to medium well drained soils with some shade. Does not like wet soils in the winter nor really dry soils in the summer. Expect the foliage to die back in the summer.

Care Tip: Prefers protection from the hot afternoon sun. After flowering cut the plant back to 6" so that the foliage can rejuvenate itself.

Exposure: Partial shade to full shade

Height: Grows 18-24" tall

Spacing: Plant 24-36" apart, 1.5-2" deep

Hardy in: USDA zones 3-9
